Sioux City Daily News, 15: Crystal Lake, Neb., July 14.—(First Bulletin).—A full grown man eating shark was sighted in about ten feet of water, just off Saunders beach here last night by Barr Lee Korn, of Sioux City, who was here to do a little fishing. Mr. Korn said the shark came to the surface of the water and spoke to him like a dog. He replied sharply, whereupon the shark jumped clear out of the water and threatened him savagely. Mr. Korn, having read of the shark scare along the Atlantic coast, became alarmed and withdrew to the clubhouse where he related his amazing story before a large assemblage of bathers. The announcement created great excitement.

Crystal Lake (Second Bulletin).—There is some doubt about the accuracy of the shark story related here by Barr Lee Korn, of Sioux City. It is reported that just before seeing the shark, Mr. Korn had been to Jackson and had merely stopped here on his way home.

Crystal Lake (Third Bulletin).—It is now definitely established that there is no truth in the shark story as related by Barr Lee Korn, of Sioux City. It is now a matter of positive record that Korn had just been to Jackson and that he was intoxicated when he made his discovery. But anyway, for a moment, Crystal Lake was in style.

Sioux City Journal, 13: Mrs. Marie Mundy, of Hubbard, Neb., who underwent an operation at the Samaritan hospital yesterday, was improved last night. Sioux Cityans will have to transport their own beer and whisky from Jefferson, S. D., and Jackson, Neb., if the supreme court upholds the decision made by Judge Frey, of Boone, in the Franklin county district court Tuesday. The Boone judge held that liquor shipped into the state at once becomes subject to the state laws. Woodbury County Antisaloona league officials asserted yesterday that they were greatly interested in the decision and that if it is affirmed in the higher court transportation companies engaged in hauling liquor to Sioux City from Nebraska and South Dakota "wet" towns will be forced out of business. "The ruling means that if a person wants liquor for his own consumption he will have to go to Jefferson or Jackson and get it himself."

John F. Joseph, attorney for the league asserted, "He cannot send a mail order to one of the wholesale houses in Nebraska or South Dakota and get the liquor delivered to his home as is now done." It is improbable that the case will be reviewed by the supreme court for several months at least and for the time being Sioux Cityans can have their liquor brought to their door by express wagons. Owners of wholesale houses supplying the Sioux City trade assert that the liquor interests will make a hard fight to have Judge

Sioux City Journal, 17: Word was received in Sioux City last night of the death of Mrs. Winfield S. White, 1523 Jackson street. She died in a hospital in New York City Saturday night. The body will be brought to Sioux City Wednesday for burial. Mrs. White had been in New York City for the last two weeks. She underwent an operation while in the hospital. She had suffered from stomach trouble for several months. Her husband, Winfield S. White, and son, Dr. March White, and Mrs. March White were in New York. Mr. and Mrs. White had lived in Sioux City for twenty-five years. They were married in LeMars, Ia. Mrs. White was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star. Surviving her, besides her husband and Dr. March White, is Howard White, another son, of Sioux City. Though scores of bathers were within a short distance of him, Fred Foster, a deaf mute, 28 years old, was drowned in five feet of water in Crystal Lake yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Two companions, also mutes, were at his side. They found difficulty in giving the alarm, and Foster was submerged for ten minutes. When the body was drawn from the water the mouth and nose were filled with moss and weeds. Assistance was summoned from Sioux City. One pulmotor, property of the Sioux City Service company, and another, property of the fire department, were hurried to the lake. The instruments drew particles of moss and weeds from the upper part of Foster's lungs. The lungs responded feebly to the pulmotor, but did not start heart action, although efforts were continued longer than an hour. Sheriff George Cain, of Dakota City, who happened to be at Crystal Lake, took charge of the body pending the arrival of W. E. Allen, of Homer, coroner of Dakota county. The body was removed to a cottage a short distance from the bathing beach. Foster lived at 521 Jennings street. He was a tailor, and was employed by the Boyer-Hollenbeck company, Fourth and Nebraska streets. He had lived in Sioux City for several years. A brother, Louis Foster, and his mother live at Rosedale, Mo., and a sister, Mrs. J. M. Kennedy, lives in Lexington, Ky. The death of Foster was the only accident reported from the Sioux City water resorts yesterday. Thousands deserted the city during the day in favor of bathing beaches and parks.

Sioux City Journal, 15: James Riley, whose leg was broken when he was dragged by a horse near Jackson, Neb., several days ago, underwent an unusual operation at St. Joseph's hospital yesterday. The bones of the thigh had been shattered and were bound together by steel plates. Although the plates will remain in the leg the physician said the boy probably will not be lame. When Policeman Moffitt, of South Sioux City, makes his next arrest he will make sure that his prisoner has not been admitted as a recruit in the United States army. Last Friday evening Leo McPherson, 20 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley McPherson, of South Sioux City, who recently joined the army and was assigned to the cavalry branch

In Jail Now, 41, a Year Ago, 105

Spokane, Wash., Review, July 1st.

The number of prisoners in the county jail yesterday, the end of six months of prohibition, was given as 41 by Sheriff LeRoy C. Walker, while the number last year at the same time was 105.

Arrests for drunkenness, vagrancy and disorderly conduct made by the police for the first six months of 1916 are as follows, together with the arrests for the same crimes during the corresponding period last year:

	1916	1915
Drunks.....	253	767
Vagrancy.....	186	692
Disorderly conduct.....	128	360
Bootlegging.....	55	...

Frey's decision reversed. House at Jackson and Jefferson are not directly interested in the case and will not finance the fight of the "wets" at Hampton, who will appeal the case. Judge Frey's decision was handed down in a case against the Theodore Hamm Brewing company, of St. Paul, which maintains a branch house at Elk Point, S. D. The Adams Express company also was a defendant. The "drys" contend in the suit that the brewing company and the express concern were maintaining a liquor nuisance at Larimer, Ia., claiming that they received and gave out liquor consigned to private parties. The defense of the defendants, which will be fought out in the supreme court, is that the liquor was in interstate traffic and that the Iowa courts have no jurisdiction.

of the service, was arrested by the patrolman for speeding in his automobile. At the time the young man was hurrying to the postoffice to mail a letter to his commanding officer at Denver, notifying him that he was about to join his troop. He was driving at high speed in order to be at the postoffice before the mails. In court Saturday morning McPherson paid a fine of $10 under protest. Before leaving in his automobile for Denver Sunday, McPherson filed with his commanding officer an account of his arrest. Civil officers, according to army regulations, have no authority to arrest a soldier of the United States army on his way to mail a letter to an officer. McPherson will attempt to recover the amount of the fine which went to the school district and a damage action is threatened against the patrolman by the young man's parents. Miss Ella Wahlburg, who came out from New York to break or establish swimming records at Crystal Lake, essayed the feat late yesterday afternoon. She was to swim from the Crystal Lake hotel to Crystal beach. The swim was to be made in either four minutes, or four hours, the reasonable record for the distance escaping mind at the moment. It is considered quite a swim, however long it may take. Miss Wahlburg was going good, until in the middle of the lake an attack of cramps sneaked up on her, and she had to give it up for the day. She said it was cramps, not a shark. Incidentally, before taking the plunge from the boat dock starting point, she discarded to some extent on sensible bathing suits. The fair bathers at the lake wear too many clothes, she advised. "There's no use for woman to burden herself down because man isn't used to bare knee caps, except on the stage," she said. "Women never can learn to get the best advantage out of the greatest exercise in the world until they quit trying to drag half a ton of clothes around in the water with them. There's a lot of this equality of the sex bunk. Convention is custom or something like that, and pretty soon all the women will be wearing no more clothes at bathing beaches than men are used to wearing. People will get used to it and think nothing of it. Why in France—? Probably so! The picture shows Miss Wahlburg's idea of a sensible bathing suit for fair swimmers, whether they be fair or nonfair. She persists that those women swimmers from Sioux City who wear the Annette Kellerman uniforms only in dangerous and secluded spots at the lake will soon be braving the crowds at the beaches. In the meantime, the street car companies are provincial enough to be making plans for added service to the resort.

Farm Notes.

Issued by the University of Nebraska College of Agriculture.
A Definition of Good Bread
Bread should have a nutty and sweet odor. There should be no sour taste or smell.
Bread should be of fine, even texture with no large holes in it. When pressed with the finger, it should dent easily, but the dent should spring back to the level surface. If the dent stays in the bread, it is not sufficiently baked. If the bread is so hard you cannot press it easily, too much flour has been used in mixing.
The crust should be uniform in thickness on all sides of the loaf. It should be rather thin and should not be hard.
The bread should be baked in such pans that it will rise easily and be of uniform height in all parts.
These are the points kept in mind by home economic workers of the College of Agriculture in scoring breads at county fairs and other contests.
Size of Irrigation Heads
It is not necessarily true that, because a large amount of water is applied to a crop in one or two irrigations, the crop gets the benefit from all the water thus put upon the land at the point of turnout, according to the Mitchell Experiment Station.

Two large losses of irrigation water must be taken into consideration—run-off and the underground seepage. The run-off is always apparent and may be reduced to a minimum by the careful irrigator by always catching the run-off from one ditch to another, the only waste being in the end runs and on the last land. The run-off loss is well taken care of by most farmers, but the seepage loss has not been called to the attention of the irrigator as forcibly as it should be, for the reason that it is a condition that is not so easily detected.

Profitable to Increase Production
Farmers whose crops are very far below the average are seldom prosperous, according to a farm management survey of 205 farms in eastern Nebraska conducted by the College of Agriculture. Forty-three farmers whose crops were 30 per cent poorer than their neighbors made less than one-fifth as much money after paying farm expenses and interest on investment as forty-four farmers whose crops averaged 29 per cent above their neighbors. The farms with intermediate or average crop yields made average profits.

While it is possible to invest so much labor and capital in securing large crop yields that the increased yield will not pay the cost, the survey indicates that the Nebraska farmer is much more likely to put too little work upon his land than too much.

What the Farm Contributes
The farm contributes more to the living of the man who owns his farm than to the tenant, according to a survey made by the College of Agriculture in eastern Nebraska. An average of the figures shows that the tenant gets $418 from the farm while the owner who operates his farm gets $525. The increase to the owner comes in the increased value of the house and the increased supply of fruit, wood, and honey. In western Nebraska the relationship is the same, but the average farm contributes somewhat less.

Gapeworms are commonly found in poultry raised on low ground. They may be seen attached to the walls of the windpipe. For treatment restrict the birds to well-drained quarters and plow the infested areas. Individual treatment necessitates the removal of the worms. By a feather moistened with turpentine swab out the windpipe.
